

Monica Leslie

Research interests

Monica graduated as valedictorian for the School of Psychology within the University of Western Australia in 2015. She received First Class Honours for her undergraduate thesis, "Exploring the Role of Obsessionality in Anorexia Nervosa: An Upward Spiral?".

Her current research centres on an exploration of oxytocin abnormalities within bulimia nervosa and binge eating disorder. Specifically, she is undertaking a proof-of-concept study to test the novel hypothesis that a single dose of oxytocin reduces subsequent bingeing tendencies in individuals with bulimia nervosa and binge eating disorder.

Qualifications

Psychology, Bachelor of Science in Psychology
27 Feb 2012 → 10 Nov 2015

Employment